

BOSTON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT LEADERS—Cardinal Cushing and the Very Rev. Michael P. Walsh, president of Boston College, welcome Robert D. Murphy, former undersecretary of State, who gave commencement address before 10,000.

States for "leaning" on the United Nations and declared: "I believe we do this because of reluctance to face up to a risk on our own national account.

"Leaning on a collectivity which includes many weak, inexperienced and frankly selfish nations leads us into situations where we are reduced to the lowest common denominator in what Gen. DeGaulle calls a 'tumultuous and scandalous forum for discord.'

The former undersecretary said that after the failure of the attempted Cuban invasion he had talked with a number of South Americans and continued:

"They would have welcomed successful intervention in Cuba because they fear expansion of Castroism in South America and doubt it will be stopped without intervention."

As for the Soviet Russian idea of "peaceful co-existence," Murphy termed that "a fake, a delusion and a snare."

Ribicoff declared that it is now America's turn to "help others" just as our founding fathers were helped by "other older and more fully developed nations."

"As a country whose belief in individual human dignity is unshakable," the former Connecticut governor added, "we feel our obligation to aid the hungry, those who urgently need more education, the millions in the new nations who do not enjoy even minimum health standards."
